U.S. Peace Silver Dollars (1922 to 1928; 1934 to 1935)

U.S. Peace Silver Dollars were minted to celebrate the end of World War I – the “War to End All Wars” – and were produced from 1921 to 1928 and then stopped. During the Great Depression, minting was resumed for two years from 1934 to 1935. The silver dollar was designed by the skilled engraver and sculptor Anthony DeFrancisci, and as shown in the right-hand picture above, its name was taken from one word at the bottom of the reverse side of the coin: “PEACE.”

An attempt was made in 1964 to produce more Peace Dollars and the U.S. government authorized 45 new silver dollars be minted – using the same design as before. After 300,000 coins were produced at the Denver mint, however, the government had a change of heart, and the new silver dollar project was cancelled. All 300,000 coins were melted down for bullion, and none were legally put into circulation. Thus, the Peace Dollar was the last true “silver dollar” in U.S. coin circulation. The Eisenhower dollar of the 1970s was minted without any silver, as was the Susan B. Anthony dollar.

U.S. Peace Dollars have had a fascinating history. Along with Morgan silver dollars, these coins were used on gaming tables in Nevada for many years before chips replaced them. In 1980, the bull market in silver bullion sent the price to nearly $50 per ounce. This happened when Hunt Brothers tried to “corner” the silver market. Before the US government stepped in and disallowed the purchase of silver contracts on the commodity future’s markets, the price of investor grade U.S. Morgan and Peace Dollars were pushed to almost $100 per coin.

Since that time, they have been collected as appreciating assets and investments. In the last 7 years, many Peace Dollars have tripled in value.

Silver Dollar Specifications:

- U.S. Peace Dollars contain .77344 troy ounces of pure silver.
- U.S. Peace Dollars are 90% pure silver and 10% copper. Copper is added for strength and durability.
- Each coin is in Very Good condition with great eye appeal.

Worth $50 to $100 Again in 2009 or 2010?

Experts in many of the financial journals see the rate of inflation accelerating in the coming years. They are predicting that the price of silver could hit $25 or even $50 per ounce in 2009 or 2010 ... if inflation keeps rising, the dollar keeps falling, or if a financial crisis in the world markets erupts. If any of these events occur, U.S. Peace Dollars could be worth as much as $50 or $100 per coin.

Why I Can Make You this Offer:

I am able to make you this offer because in 2004 I bought a collection of Peace Dollars from a gentleman who needed to sell in 7 days. He wanted to take advantage of another financial opportunity. Coin dealers offered him 50% of the retail value of his collection – which is a normal offer from dealers – but I was willing to pay him 15% more. This resulted in more money for him – and a very good investment for me. NOTE: Supplies are limited. This offer is good until these Peace Dollars are gone. If your response is received after my supply is exhausted, it will not be accepted and your check will be returned un-cashed.
